Oaths and Affirmations of Office and Allegiance

Public Service of Ontario Act, Regulation 373/07

Oaths and affirmations are important components of the ethical framework for public servants in the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006. This framework emphasizes the importance of acting in an ethical manner to maintain the special trust placed in public servants by the people of Ontario. Public servants are required to swear or affirm two oaths – the Oath or Affirmation of Office and the Oath or Affirmation of Allegiance.

The Oath or Affirmation of Office was revised November 6, 2017 in recognition of the Government's commitment to reconciliation with Indigenous partners. By making the Oath or Affirmation of Office, a public servant promises to faithfully discharge duties, respect the laws of Canada and Ontario (including the recognition and affirmation of the Aboriginal and treaty rights of Indigenous peoples) and not to disclose confidential information or documents unless legally authorized. There are no exemptions allowed in relation to the Oath or Affirmation of Office.

By making the Oath or Affirmation of Allegiance, a public servant pledges loyalty to the Crown, identified as the reigning Sovereign, symbolizing the Canadian State and system of government. There are two exemptions allowed in relation to the Oath or Affirmation of Allegiance related to foreign citizenship and Indigenous considerations.
